Origin of the Score

The original score was drafted during Britten's voyage from the United States to England, where he was seeking refuge from the war. The piece was initially intended for a small choir of treble voices, accompanied by a harp, a choice that reflects Britten's interest in medieval carols and early English music. The manuscript was completed in December 1942, and its immediate success cemented its place in the choral canon.

Manuscript and Publication

The published score was first issued by Boosey & Hawkes, who recognized its potential as a staple Christmas work. Over the years, editions have been refined and adapted, but most performances rely on the authoritative editions that faithfully represent Britten's original intentions.
